10 CHARGE FOR FIREARMS COP

By Russ Lawrence

russ.lawrence@nlhnews.co.uk

THE police officer who shot dead a Tottenham man in an operation which foiled a plot to spring a dangerous criminal from a prison van will not face criminal charges.

Jermaine Baker, 28, was shot as armed police swooped on a car parked close to Wood Green Crown Court in December 2015, as he and other members of a five-man gang waited to ambush a prison van in a bid to break out a prisoner being brought from Wormwood Scrubs jail to face sentencing on firearmsrelated charges.

An investigation into the shooting was conducted by the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC) and on Wednesday the Crown Prosecution Service said the officer, known only as W80, would not face any criminal charge.

The IPCC has submitted the report to the Metropolitan Police.

The Met's directorate of professional standards is considering its findings as to whether there were breaches of misconduct.

The four co-conspirators in the plot, three from Haringey and one from Enfield were later sentenced to a total of 30 years. The dangerous criminal they tried to spring was later sentenced to eight-andhalf years for his part in the plot, having already received 14 years for the firearms charges he had being facing on the day the plot to spring him was thwarted.

Deputy Assistant Commissioner Peter Terry said: "Our thoughts continue to be with Mr Baker's family at this difficult time.

"It is completely natural that they want answers as to how he lost his

New book examines a little-known American tragedy

INFAMOUS American school massacres like those at Columbine and Sandy Hook, in which dozens of innocent students were slaughtered, are regarded as a relatively modern-day phenomenon.

But an astonishing 70 years before two teens went on a shooting spree killing 13 and wounding 20 others at Columbine High School in Colorado in 1996, a less well known atrocity occurred which still stands as the deadliest school massacre to ever take place in the small Michigan Town of Bath in May, 1927, when school board trustee Adam Kehoe blew up the school, killing 38 children as well as several adults, forms the backdrop to the debut novel of Haringey resident, Andy Regan.

"I'd read about the central incident by chance," said the lawyer and education centre instructor.

Kehoe was a trained electrician and engineer who wired the school with around 1,000 pounds of dynamite and had planned the attack over a long period of time following disputes with the school's superintendent and others.

Mr Regan became fascinated and began researching the subject.

The book, entitled The Stars Move Still, mixes actual characters and fictional ones and tells what happens when a cold, calculating individual chooses to punish the most vulnerable in the community out of misplaced revenge.

Andy who lives in Alexandra Park Road said: "I loved writing my first book because I researched and set it down over a long period of time, working at the pace I wanted so it never became a chore.

"I wanted a dramatic story line set amidst interesting historical perspective.

"The book has a contemporary relevance given the horrific events which recently took place in Mandon, as it traces

Special service for armed forces

RESIDENTS are invited to join in a celebration to support serving troops, veterans, cadets and service families on Sunday.

The Armed Forces Day parade will begin at 11.40am from the Enfield War Memorial at the junction of Windmill and Chase Side.

The procession will take the route to the Civic Centre, in Silver Street, where at noon the Armed forces flag will be raised followed by a cadet presentation.

The parade will finish with a buffet at the Royal British Legion, in Nags Head Road.

"Armed Forces Day is an opportunity for us to we celebrate the work of the brave servicemen and women who work so hard to keep our country safe," said councillor Yasemin Brett, Enfield Council's cabinet member for community, arts and culture.

"I'd urge residents come out and take advantage of this huge opportunity to salute the armed forces for the service and the sacrifice they make on behalf of us all and also to pay tribute to families who support them.'

"It's important to show our respect and appreciation, so I'm looking forward to as many people as possible joining me on Sunday to thank them for their efforts.

Churchyard hosts community picnic as arts festival marks death of MP - and celebrates Lambs' legacy

SCORES of people turned out on Saturday for a community picnic in the churchyard of All Saints in Edmonton.

It was held for to mark the start of an annual week long arts festival celebrating the lives and legacies of Charles and Mary Lamb and the anniversary of the death of MP Jo Cox. People shared food, played games and enjoyed the blazing sunshine in Church Street.

The Lamb festival is held each year to celebrate the famous sib-lings who are buried in the churchyard in Edmonton.

During their lifetimes, Charles and Mary were a central part of a literary circle which included Samuel Taylor Coleridge, William and Dorothy Wordsworth, and William Hazlitt.

They were the authors of essays, poems and plays and their most enduring literary legacy was their Tales from Shakespeare, prose versions of some of Shakespeare's plays written especially for children.

Last year hundreds of people visited All Saints, in Church Street, for a week of poetry, music, theatre and a wide range of other events.

Vicar, Father Stuart Owen, said: "There were people from the church, from the Lamb festival and from the Edmonton community, so there was a great atmosphere."

The event was one of thousands of similar Great Get Together events held around the UK in memory of Jo Cox, MP for Batley and Spen, who was murdered on June 16 last year.

The closing celebration is on Friday at 7pm with prize-giving and music from Tottenham Community Choir.

Man died after accident, inquest told

By Clare Casey

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

A DELIVERY driver suffered a head injury when the wheel on his hand trolley exploded while he was changing it, an inquest heard.
Shaw Thomas, 45, from Buxton Close, Edmonton, was struck on the forehead by the metal rim of the wheel in the incident at the Lyreco depot on the Mowlem Trading Estate in Leeside Road, Tottenham.

Fellow delivery driver Eric Smith told the inquest: "We unscrewed about two nuts and as we were about to do the third the wheel

Another driver, Stephen McFarlane said he heard a "loud popping" and turned to see that the rim had hit the roof of the warehouse and that Mr Shaw was holding his head. He said: "It just looked like a teeny little bump like when you've banged your head on a cupboard."

The inquest, at North London Coroner's Court heard how Mr Thomas, an employee of recruit-ment agency The FTS Group, felt "a bit dizzy" but said he was okay and didn't need medical treatment

He carried on working as normal, but went to North Middlesex Hospital just over two months later on July 31, after he had suffered dizziness while decorating his house.

The inquest heard he had an "enormous" subdural haematoma, a condition in which blood collects between the skull and the brain.

Consultant neurosurgeon Joan Grieve told the inquest there had been a slow build-up of pressure in his head caused by bleeding.

She said: "He arrived at hospital just at the point when the pressure in his head was tipping from being very high to critical."

Acting for Lyreco, barrister Alice Jarratt said Miss Grieve could not be sure this was related to the incident at Lyreco.

Miss Grieve said there was no evidence to suggest there was any other cause, although she said she had at first thought "a relatively mild head injury at work was not the whole explana-

The inquest heard that three months after surgery Mr Thomas was transferred to the Neuro Rehabilitation Centre (NRC) at Edgware Community Hospital where he underwent physiotherapy in the gym and needed help with standing and sitting, and that he had a poor short-term memory.

Consultant neurosurgeon Dr Gerrard Davis said he hadn't been prescribed 'Ted' stockings for reducing the risk of deep vein thrombosis (DVT) - and that the DVT he was later found to have suffered was likely to have been present before admission to the NRC.

Police were called after Mr Thomas's sudden death on October 14 last year and his room at the NRC was initially cordoned off as a crime scene. The inquest continues.

Mayor hails kids after transformation triumph

A DRAB, unused piece of waste land has been transformed into a 'landscaped area of tranquillity' in the heart of Edmonton.

Monmouth Road Green was officially opened by the Mayor of Enfield, Christine Hamilton, on Monday, having been regen-erated with the help of green fin-gered pupils from St Edmund's Catholic Primary School in Hertford Road.

The open space complements one of Edmonton's "most beautiful and historically significant residential area".

The land forms part of The Crescent conservation area in Edmonton, where grade II listed buildings from the early 19th century form a crescent of ter-raced four-storey houses, unique in Enfield.

The final design of the space was shaped by the local community during a public consulta-tion last summer.

There is an arc of trees and curving footpath - to mirror the shape of the historic crescent as well as a central paving feature, which includes an engravDaniel Defoe's writing about the area.

Doug Taylor, Enfield Council's leader, said: "This wonderful, public space complements the recent council-led improvements to The Crescent to both private properties and those owned by our project partners Newlon Housing Trust.

"The co-ordinated repairs and restoration have contributed to the uplift of the area and seen improvements for all to enjoy.

"The main triumph of this regeneration has been the participation of the community in this project.

"We want people to have access to green, open spaces and moreover, to have a say as to how their living areas are shaped.

"Looking ahead, we anticipate further investment into the area which already is a thriving, cosmopolitan place to live, work and be educated in, leading to a strong community focus."

Ninety-year-old John Rainbow and wife Margaret, aged 80, from Chatsworth Drive, will mark the special occasion with a family gettogether tomorrow.

After frequent visits to the store, John, who was 27 at the time, plucked up the courage to ask Margaret, 17, on a date to watch a movie.

The couple tied the knot in 1957 and honeymooned in Bournemouth for a week, which Margaret remembers involved "nice, long walks on the beach".

A BANNED taser was among the weapons haul seized by cops as part of Enfield Police's six-week crackdown on knife and drug crime.

The stun gun was concealed down the waistband of a man stopped and searched by patrolling police as part of Operation Bremont.

A CARING nine-year-old hopes singer Ed Sheeran will chop off her hair to donate to a charity which makes free wigs for children suffering from cancer.

Alexandra Savvides, of Pembroke Road, Enfield, has grown her hair for the past two years but decided to embark on this cutting edge experience to "help ill children".

The pupil at Carterhatch Juniors, in Carterhatch Lane, will donate 12 inches of her tresses to the Little Princess Trust, which makes wigs for children who have lost their hair through cancer treatment.

She is also raising funds for Great Ormond Street Hospital, which cares for very ill children, through an online JustGiving page.

Alexandra has asked friends at school if they too would be willing to donate their

Her mother Despina said she was extremely proud of her daughter.

"There has been so much support from people who have sent lovely messages, and other children are more than welcome to take part," said the 36-year-old.

"It's a big thing to sacrifice," explained Despina. "I was a little sceptical at first but she's at that age where she wants to do things on her own."

Despina said she would get in touch with singer Ed Sheeran's agent in the hope that he will agree to cut off her daughter's hair. "He's one of her favourite musicians and it may be difficult to get hold of him but it would certainly help to raise as much money as possible."

Alexandra's friend Anisa Kusagli, who goes to Chace Community School, in Churchbury Lane, is also donating 12 inches of her waist-long hair.

The 11-year-old who lives in Magpie Close, wanted to help raise funds for charity after her cousin died from a brain tumour hair-raising experience in July.

Enfield Green Party

ELL, what a strange election campaign, and what an unexpected

We Greens were delighted to see Caroline Lucas return to Parliament, representing the Brighton Pavilion constituency, with a doubled majority, proving again what an electoral asset principles are.

We were also pleased to see (unprincipled) Theresa May get a well-deserved bloody nose, and face the next five years (?) with a Tory minority government rather than the expected big majority, able to do whatever mischief it wanted.

The defeat of David Burrowes was another big bonus.

We have, too, an opposition that looks like it might start to oppose, and which has 'borrowed' many of our policies, though they remain strangely ambivalent about PR.

Time for a reality check, though: we still have a Tory government which pays lip service to climate change but does all it can to trash the nascent renewables industry, while continuing to subsidise fossil fuels; which demonises welfare-recipients and immigrants; which inveighs against terrorism while supporting and selling arms to the Saudis; and which, as I write, looks likely to form a pact with the even more odious DUP just to stay in power.

But the really good news is that politics has changed. Theresa May may soon be remembered as the leader who unintentionally started the political pendulum swinging back leftwards.

Do you support your party's leader now, Ms Ryan? | I was honoured

I WAS sorry to see Nick de Bois end up unsuccessful in his attempt at re-election in Enfield North last week. I felt that Nick was a fantastic servant to his constituents during his time as MP between 2010 and 2015 and ran a very positive campaign this time around.

There is no doubt that Labour secured an impressive majority in Enfield North. However, it was disappointing to read some clear untruths in Joan Ryan's campaign.

For example, she claimed that she

'protected services at Chase Farm Hosthe last Labour government, of which she was a member, that originally approved plans for the downgrade of its A&E. She also claimed that Mr de Bois 'couldn't care less about Enfield". His time as MP proved that to be utterly

Prior to the election, Ms Ryan made no secret of the fact that she did not support Jeremy Corbyn as Labour leader, going so far as to write a letter to constituents saying that "no one thinks Theresa May will not be Prime Minister". Now that the election is over, with Labour performing better than many polls predicted, perhaps she could tell us whether she now supports Jeremy Corbyn or not. If, as she claims, she represents all of us in Enfield North I'm sure she won't have any problem with addressing these matters.

These unsung heroes offer essential support

HAVING just read your front page article ("Carer Jailed", Advertiser, June 14) I would like to make the distinction between the term "carer" as distinct from "care worker" - an employee paid to support someone.

Enfield Carers Centre supports carers with a variety of services such as information, advice, advocacy, counselling, training, carers' breaks, benefits advice and peer support groups.

There are approximately 30,000 people living in Enfield who identified themselves in the 2011 census as looking after a relative, partner or close friend who needs their help because of disability, illness, frailty or a substance

These people are unpaid/family carers and part of 6.5million carers in the UK. Many provide care for their loved one for more than 35 hours a week.

National research by Carers UK valued the contribution carers make at £132 billion each year – that's close to the total annual cost of health spending in the UK (£134.1bn in 14-15). However, the term carer is too often misused to describe people who choose to perform the paid role of care worker.

Family carers rarely have the luxury of choice over whether they provide necessary care to their relative

Last week was Carers Week (June 12-18) - an annual campaign to raise awareness of caring, highlight the challenges carers face and recognise the contribution they make to families and communities throughout the UK.

The numbers of unpaid carers is rising faster than the general population. Each day, 6,000 people take on a caring role, but an online, public poll (issued June 12) showed that many people are unaware how likely it is they would take on a caring role and would be unprepared if they did become a carer.

Carers have worse health than the general public; carers providing 50 hours or more a week of care are more than twice as likely to be in bad health as non-carers. I hope the Advertiser can help us raise the profile of Enfield's carers as unsung heroes providing essential support to their loved ones. They need recognition and for their voices to be heard.

My hands hurt from clapping!

I ENJOYED the Children's International Voices of Enfield (CIVE) cabaret on June 11 so much that my hands hurt from clapping so hard after each song.

The average age of the soloists was just 14 and a half yet they performed musical theatre and popular songs with such passion and conviction that it often made me cry.

by singer and actress, Joanne Farrell, who brought West End glitz and glamour to the Dugdale Theatre! Joanne's coaching had enabled the children, many of whom are clearly destined to be stars themselves, to perform like professionals.

I also cried with laughter at the show's compere, Anthony Harris. His exuberance and quick wit were so captivating I could have listened to him for hours and hours. He deserves his own TV show!

My particular thanks go to June and Christopher Keyte, who founded CIVE over 26 years ago, for all their hard work and dedication in providing the wonderful gift of music to all the children in Enfield.

to serve as MP

MAY I thank the people of Enfield Southgate for the privilege and pleasure of representing you as MP for 12

It is a great constituency full of great people, associations and concerns. Thank you also for the 20,634 electors who voted for me on June 8.

This election was the third time in 20 years when a big swing has unseated the incumbent Enfield Southgate MP.

Each time the result raised serious questions for the losing party and, as I said at the count, for the Conservatives we need to develop an agenda full of hope, aspiration and compassion. We need to reflect and listen to the result, and be ready to return to the fray for the local council elections next year.

I congratulate Bambos Charalambous on his victory and wish him well in his service of our local area.

I now look forward to spending more time with my wife and children, who have been such a great support. I will continue to champion social justice causes like recovery from addiction and homelessness.

Finally, can I thank my staff who have given such loyal service for countless constituents, and especially Jane Kelly who has worked tirelessly for me for 12 years?

David Burrowes Former MP for Enfield Southgate

They put profit before safety

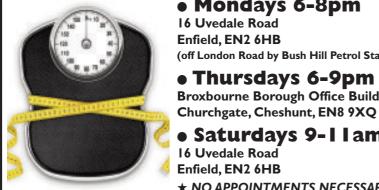

THE Grenfell Tower fire, and its terrible consequences, should give pause for reflection to those developers, architects, local authorities and builders who commission and construct with the aim of minimising expenditure and maximising income.

Buildings that are poorly constructed, dangerous and ugly – the consequence of bad design and workmanship – are an insult to those who have to live in them and those who have to look at them, for streetscape and environment affect the quality of people's lives.

I hope there will be some criminal prosecutions in this and comparable cases, and stricter regulations to bring to an end the widespread practice of profit before safety and suitability. Garry Humphreys

Contest proves a Glee-ful occasion

The stage is set: Compere George Sesay and, right, young finalists from Galliard School perform at the Millfield Theatre

By Clare Casey

newsdesk@nlhnews.co.uk

EDMONTON kids did themselves proud when they battled it out in a singing and dancing competition to be crowned the borough's top performers.

Edmonton Glee saw 20 schools performing at the Millfield Theatre, Silver Street, on Monday in front of talent scouts who have promised scholarships to the world famous Pineapple Dance Studios in Covent Garden, to children who "show promise".

The competition was organised by the Edmonton Schools Partnership which works together to raise aspirations and provide opportunities for children in the area. The partnership commissioned Pineapple Performing Arts to deliver weekly Glee Clubs, based on the music and singing from the American hit TV series Glee. Spokeswoman Kika Charalambous said: "The Glee project, based on the popular TV series, gives local children the opportunity to take part in Glee clubs where they are able to showcase and develop their singing and dancing talents.

"The fully inclusive clubs, run by inspirational tutors from Pineapple Performing Arts School, focus on fun and raising aspirations. There is also a competitive element where all Glee clubs are brought together at the end of the project to perform at a prestigious London theatre in a live show in front of a panel of judges."

The children didn't perform in central London because of parents' concerns about travelling into the capital in the wake of recent terrorist attacks, but instead performed on stage at Millfield Theatre.

FAMILY ANNOUNCEMENTS

Royal reward for Rosina as family celebrate her 100th

By Priya Kingsley-Adam

priya.kingsley-adam@nlhnews.co.uk

A SPECIAL message of congratulation from the Queen crowned staunch royalist Rosina Garnish's 100th birthday celebrations.

The great-grandmother, from Ashridge Gardens, in Palmers Green, reached the special milestone recently and had a joint celebration with her 72-year-old daughter, Sheila, who shares the same birthday on June 7.

"That's a birthday present that lasts," Rosina's late husband Sid used to say.

Dozens of close friends and family members gathered for a garden party to celebrate the special occasion on Sunday, June 11.

"It was a fantastic day to spend together," said Sheila, of Glebe Avenue, who is the oldest daughter of Rosina's three children.

Rosina has been an Enfield resident for more than 50 years but grew up in Hackney, with sisters Florence and Alice.

After finishing her training as a court dress-maker at trade school, Rosina's first job was in Bond Street, London, where she had the honour of making a leather pair of gloves for Clementine, the wife of former prime minister Sir Winston Churchill.

The centenarian has been fond of the royal family ever since.

"I love them," she said. "They are just like us. They are genuine people."

At the age of 23 Rosina married Sid in 1939. The couple had three children – Sheila, Marion, who is now 65, and Paul, 58. They first settled in Bowes Road for five years, in Arnos Grove, followed by Ashridge Gardens.

Alongside dress making from home, Rosina provided an after-school club for 15 years where she cooked dinner for six children every evening during the week.

She was also a carer for elderly residents in the borough which her daughter Sheila said was part of her nature.

"She's always enjoyed looking after people," explained Sheila.

Neighbours knew they could always rely on Rosina to repair their clothes and she regularly

Rosina was married for 50 years and celebrated her diamond wedding anniversary a month before Sid died at 81. She attributes her longevity to "luck".

Rosina enjoys reading romance novels and reciting poems at family gatherings including one of her favourites – Charles Kingsley's My Little Doll.

"She still knows all the words which always impresses us all," said Sheila.

What's on and what's coming

A decade to remember.

By Russ Lawrence

russ.lawrence@nlhnews.co.uk

'IF you remember the 1960s you weren't really there,' goes the famous quote referring to the mind-altering drug use synonymous with the era.

But brilliant music is what the decade is most renowned for and a live show featuring pop legends from the period lets everyone, of whatever generation, relive the "swinging sixties" experience at Edmonton's Millfield Theatre on Sunday night.

In Bringing Back the 60s, memories of flower power, psychedelia, mini-skirts, Carnaby Street and the 'Summer of Love' are revived.

The sounds and atmosphere of one of the defining decades in music and popular culture are recreated by the New Amen Corner - the contemporary descendants of classic band Amen Corner, who were famous for hits such as Bend Me Shake Me If Paradise Was Half As Nice, High in the Sky, and Hello Suzie, amongst others.

Performing with them are two sixties icons- singer songwriter, Mike D'Abo, formerly of Manfred Mann and the singer known as 'the voice.' Chris Farlowe,

The two-hour long show is a nostalgia fest for aficionados of sixties music.

The original Amen Corner was one of the most exciting and influential bands on the pop scene in the late sixties.

With a mix of mod, psychedelic power pop, with heavy horns, swirling Hammond organ, and the distinctive voice of Andy Fairweather Low they became household names and many of their hits were million sellers.

The band were together three years before splitting up and although there have been repeated requests for them to reform over the decades the prospect became more and

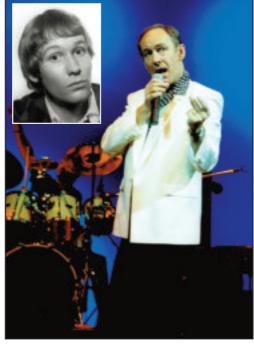

It was a long-standing friendship between Alan Jones, an original saxophonist with Amen Corner and veteran sax player Frogman Curtis, which led to Curtis setting up New Amen Corner to keep the memory of the legendary band alive.

Mike d'Abo, who replaced Paul Jones as the Manfred Mann's lead singer, provided the vocals on the Manfreds' classic hits Just Like A Woman, Semi-Detached Suburban Mr James, Ha Ha Said The Clown and Mighty Quinn.

His award-winning song-writing credits include worldwide hits Handbags and Gladrags, which Rod Stewart and The Stereophonics both recorded and was the theme to the TV sitcom, The Office, as well as writing the Foundations' hit Build Me Up Buttercup, which reached number two in the charts in 1968

Handbags and Gladrags was written by D'Abo for Chris Farlowe, who originally recorded it, and composer and artiste perform it together on the Bringing Back The 60s show.

Farlowe is best known for his million selling classic Out of Time, a Jagger & Richards composition written especially for him, which was number one in the charts in the same week England won the World Cup in 1966.

TRANSFORMERS: THE LAST KNIGHT (12A,

HE battle between the last vestiges of mankind and the Transformers reaches a shattering conclusion in the fifth and final picture in the bombastic franchise, directed by Michael Bay.

Following events in Transformers: Age Of Extinction, The Last Knight opens after Optimus Prime (voiced by Peter Cullen) has temporarily abandoned Earth in search of the Autobots'

He leaves behind machines including Bumblebee and Hound (John Goodman) to protect humanity from the continuing onslaught of the dinobots and the revitalised Decepticons, led by Megatron (Frank Welker).

It transpires that there is a long history of collaboration between humans and robots stretching back to the rule of King Arthur. Esteemed historian and astronomer Sir Edmund Burton (Sir Anthony Hopkins) knows about a dark secret buried in time and he issues a rallying cry to save Earth from destruction. Spirited Oxford university professor Viviane Wembly (Laura Haddock) answers the call along with familiar faces Cade

her daredevil pals.
They must understand why the Transformers keep returning and learn painful lessons from the past that could tip the war in favour of humanity.

However, salvation comes at a price and some of the resistance will have to sacrifice their lives for the greater good.

Motors

By Simon Davis

he third generation Yaris has been around for some time now long enough in fact to have been subjected to no less than two facelifts since it was first introduced in 2011. With this latest refresh, Toyota has dropped its 1.33-litre engine in favour of a new 1.5-litre power plant that is both more powerful and more efficient than its predecessor.

Toyota has also really stepped its game up as far as standard safety equipment is concerned – a factor that will no doubt appeal to family buyers. Even the entry-level Active models come equipped with the Toyota Safety Sense system, which includes a plethora of alerts and warning systems, including lane departure alert and autonomous emergency braking.

To the untrained eye, the changes to the Yaris' appearance might go unnoticed. The new front end has been styled to imitate a catamaran ship with a wide, angular grille dominating proceedings and giving the Yaris a slightly more aggressive demeanour.

Round the back of the car is where the most noticeable changes have been implemented. Toyota has completely redesigned the shape of the tail-lights which supposedly echo those found on larger, more premium models.

Customers also have the choice of opting for the new Bi-tone specification, which adds a contrasting roof and pillars for an even more striking appearance – particularly when paired with the bold new Tokyo Red and Nebula Blue exterior colours.

Sat behind a six-foot driver and front passengers, taller adults in the back of the new Yaris will find their knees brush against the seats in front of them, while their heads might narrowly avoid touching the roof. There's certainly not an abundance of room in the back of the car, but two adults should be able to travel reasonable distances without getting too uncomfortable.

As far as boot space is concerned, the Yaris offers up 286 litres of storage capacity. While this figure might not be class-leading by any means, it should meet the requirements of most family buyers.

Our experience of the Yaris was mostly limited to low-speed, urban driving, which it handled amicably. The controls were light and easy to operate, meaning the little Toyota was incredibly easy to place exactly where you wanted it - a factor that will no doubt appeal to those who will buy one of these for almost exclusive city

Motorways didn't really cause it to flinch, either, with the Yaris remaining planted and confident throughout. Where it did fall down, however, was in the engine refinement department, with the 1.0-litre engine in particular making itself heard at cruising speed. Unfortunately, we didn't get a chance to put the Yaris' handling abilities to the test, as the Dutch roads that made up our test route were all arrow straight and silky smooth and didn't cause the supermini to break a sweat. Final judgement on its dynamic capabilities can't really be passed until we've had a go back on British soil.

We got behind the wheel of the midrange Icon Tech model, which costs from £15,045. Standard equipment is generous, with features such as satellite navigation, rear parking camera and a seven-inch touchscreen multimedia system all included as standard.

One of the key selling points, however, is the large emphasis that Toyota has placed on safety across the entire Yaris range. All cars - from the entrylevel Active model all the way up to the Excel and Bi-tone models - come with Toyota Safety Sense as standard. This includes pre-collision system, autonomous emergency braking, lane departure alert and automatic highbeam. Road sign assist is also included on cars in Icon specification and above

EXCITED FOR NEXT SEASON

By Dominique Stafford

sport.enfield@nlhnews.co.uk

TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR manager Mauricio Pochettino admits that he cannot wait for the start of the new season following the publication of the Premier League fixtures.

The fixtures for the coming campaign were released on Wednesday last week and Spurs will begin their quest to go one better than last time around – when they finished second – by making the trip to newly promoted Newcastle United on the weekend of August 12.

They then begin life at their temporary home of Wembley Stadium with a tough clash against champions Chelsea the following weekend, while another home clash follows against Burnley on the weekend of August 26 before there is a two-week gap in the fixtures for the first international break of the season.

The first north London derby of the season sees Tottenham visiting Arsenal on the weekend of Noveme ber 18, with the return fixture taking place at Wembley on February 10.

The always hectic festive period sees Spurs going to Burnley on December 24 and hosting Southampton on Boxing Day before further matches at home to West Ham United on December 30 and at Swansea City on New Year's Day.

Tottenham Hotspur round off their season by entertaining Leicester City on May 13.

But Pochettino is currently not

But Pochettino is currently not looking further ahead than the first few matches and is expecting a tough opener against a Newcastle side who crushed Spurs 5-1 when the teams last met at St James' Park on the final day of the 2015/16 season.

"We're starting to prepare the season and we cannot wait to start

Raring to go: Mauricio Pochettino is already eagerly anticipating the start of the new campaign again," the manager said. "This is a moment for our players to enjoy their holidays and try to recharge the batteries, but for us we're thinking about starting the season in the best condition.

"I'm always positive about the fixtures. The Premier League is tough and we start in Newcastle. That will be exciting because it's our first game and then our first game at Wembley is against Chelsea — I'm sure the fans will be excited for that as well.

"Newcastle is another motivation for us. The way that we finished the season before last is not too much important now but we'll have that in our mind to motivate us and we'll try to win. Next season will be exciting and to start at St James' Park will be very motivating for us."

Meanwhile, Kieran Trippier has spoken of his pride after winning his first senior cap for England in their 3-2 defeat away to France on Tuesday last week.

Trippier produced an encouraging display in what was a generally disappointing performance from England – despite two goals from Harry Kane – and he admits that he hopes he will feature many more times in the coming years.

"It was an amazing feeling being in the tunnel thinking I was about to make my debut," he said. "I knew my parents were in the crowd and I was just thinking of them, because they have done so much for me to get where I am now.

get where I am now.

"As soon as I saw my England shirt, knowing I was starting, the feeling was amazing. I was buzzing and so proud to wear it and to sing the national anthem with my team-mates.

"The whole experience was unbelievable. It's always an honour to play for your country, and hopefully there will be many more."

Box Cup reaches tenth anniversary

THE world's largest amateur boxing tournament celebrated its tenth anniversary over the weekend as the Haringey Box Cup took place at Alexandra Palace.

The competition was established in 2008 by the Haringey Police and Community Amateur Boxing Club and now attracts entries from around the world – with clubs from 16 different countries, including Sri Lanka, Canada and Australia, competing over the three days.

More than 250 males and female boxers across a variety of weight categories and ages entered the tournament this year, with the first day of the competition on Friday seeing a record 160 bouts across five rings.

Sunday's finals day saw Kings Heath ABC, based in Northampton, win the best team title, with five winners at the event, taking the crown from last year's winners Repton Boxing Club in East London.

Gerry Willmott, coach at Haringey Boxing Club and one of the founders of the event, said: "Ten years on and the Box Cup is now one of the biggest community events of the year in Haringey. It's been a special event for us and the standard of boxing seems to get higher every year."

There was also a Youth Day on Thursday, where 1,400 youngsters from schools across London attended to see a range of activities and jobs fairs from supporters of the event including the Army and the Tottenham Hotspur Foundation.

And William Hill, sponsors of the Box Cup, hosted a competition across the three-day event, inviting boxing clubs and visitors the chance to win a community project to benefit their local area.

Highgate cruise to a derby victory against North London

HIGHGATE secured the local bragging rights on Saturday as they eased to a seven-wicket win at North London which maintained their place at the top of Division Two of the Kingspan Middlesex County Cricket League.

The table-toppers produced an excellent performance in the field after putting North London into bat as they dismissed their hosts for 155

David Monk (3-32 and Scott Elstone (3-49) were the most successful bowlers, while Hussain Shabbir and Tom Wakeford top-scored for the hosts with 36 apiece.

Highgate lost two early wickets in reply, but Christopher Arul (71 not out) and Elstone (71) then shared in a stand of 140 for the third wicket which took them to the brink of victory as they eased to 157-3.

Elsewhere in Division Two, 16-year-old Ben Waine hit the last ball of the match for six to seal Hornsey's first win of the season in dramatic fashion.

Playing at high-flying Harrow St Mary's, Hornsey did well with the ball to dismiss their hosts for 168 – with Paul Weekes (3-63) and Tahmid Islam (3-49) doing much of the damage.

Weekes then continued his fine day by making 70 in the visitors' reply, but the result remained in doubt right until Waine's last-gasp heroics helped Hornsey make it to 173-8 to seal a two-wicket victory. Syed Khawar Ali Kazmi (6-63) shone with the ball for Harrow St Mary's.

Meanwhile, North Middlesex eased to a 63-run triumph at Hampstead in the Premier Division.

James Parslow (82) and Evan Flowers (73) shared in a stand of 151 for the third wicket as the visitors posted a total of 280 batting first.

This score proved far too much for a Hampstead side who could only reach 217 in reply, with Tom Nicoll (4-66) and Luke Hollman (3-42) the pick of the bowlers.

North Middlesex entertain Stanmore on Saturday, while Hornsey host North London and Highgate go to Indian Gymkhana.
